TRAVEL TIPS

WHEN TO GO

The weather in the UK and Ireland varies throughout the year and they experience four distinct seasons, at times overlapping. There's always a great reason to visit, no matter what the season.

Summer (June to August) is the warmest season, with long sunny days and cooler evenings. Take advantage of the extra daylight hours to explore quaint country villages or dine alfresco.

In autumn (September to November), the temperature starts to dip and nights become colder. It's a beautiful time to visit as the countryside is ablaze with colour as autumn leaves turn riotous shades of yellow, orange and red.

Winter (December to February) brings shorter days and cold conditions, often with rain and sometimes snow. It also brings Christmas, a magical time of year with markets, mulled wine and hot chocolate.

In spring (March to May), the days slowly get longer and temperatures warmer but it can still be quite wet and windy. However, spring showers bring May flowers and the Chelsea Flower Show!

GETTING AROUND

The best way to discover the UK and Ireland is by car or rail. Self drive holidays allow you to explore at your own pace. Remember in the UK and Ireland, driving is also on the left hand side of the road. Travelling by train is a scenic and relaxing way to see the country and adds a sense of adventure to your trip.
